NEW THEATER OPEN SEPT. 1

WORK IS PUSHED RAPIDLY ON J. F. COOK ENTERPRISE.

SEATS HAVE ARRIVED

Holes Are Punched In Floor By Electric Drill, While Painters Use Electric Brush.

September 1 was announced today as the probable opening date for Maryville's new theater, being erected by J. F. Cook.

While far from finished, work on the interior of the new building is progressing rapidly. Six distinct operations were in progress today.

In one part of the theater, carpenters were at work, while plasterers were adding the final touches to their work. An electric drill was punching holes through the concrete floor preparatory to the placing of seats, and an electric air brush was in use by the painters applying a third coat to the ceiling.

Underneath and at the side of the stage, other workmen were installing the specially built pipe organ which is to furnish music in the new amusement house. This work calls also for electricians.

The pipe organ is the same type as is used in the Tootle Theater in St. Joseph, according to J. R. Cook, manager. It was constructed especially for the theater here after its dimensions had been furnished by Mr. Cook.

The seats have arrived and will be installed as soon as the painters have finished with the ceiling and the scaffolding can be removed. Downstairs there will be 525 seats and upstairs a few more than 300. The seats are of steel, with leather cushions.

An elaborate heating and ventilating system already has been installed.

This afternoon the managers will buy a curtain, scenery and draperies. Clarence E. Cook of Kansas City, accompanied by the architect, arrived this afternoon to assist in the selection. A decorator-designer also was expected this afternoon.

Completion of the marquise and foyer is being delayed until aftere the interior is finished.

Return of Dr. James Asked by Conference

Church Wants Him Retained At Maryville—Number Of Reports Given At Meeting.

The return of Dr. C. C. James as pastor of the First M. E. Church here was unanimously requested at the fourth quarterly conference held at the church last night. Dr. James has been very successful in his work here and it was under his direction that the church building was remodeled and is now one of the best in the conference.

A number of reports were given at the conference, all showing the church in good condition. During the last year, $11,439 has been paid on the remodeled building. The Ladies Aid Society has raised $1,700 and has paid $700 on the church debt. The women hope to have paid off $1,000 by the end of the fiscal year, October 1. The Sunday school has paid $303.96 on the debt, a report shows.

Dr. E. B. Thompson of St. Joseph, district superintendent, was in charge of the conference.

COMPENSATION LAW NEEDED

MISSOURI MUST ATTRACT INDUSTRIES, DYER SAYS.

TREND IS NOW WEST

Big Concerns Would Locate In State If Conditions Were Better, Speak- Declares Here.

A picture of a great industrial Missouri of the future was painted last night by Dr. G. W. Dyer in his address at the First M. E. Church here under the auspices of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce.

A small sized-crowd heard the lecture which was provided by the public relations department of the Associated Industries of Missouri.

Dr. Dyer believes there is a great future, industrially, for Missouri providing no hampering legislation is adopted and the workmen's compensation law is approved by the voters this fall.

Because of the lack of a compensation law, Dr. Dyer said, great business enterprises have avoided Missouri. This is due, he explained, to the high rates on insurance against damage suits.

At the present time, the speaker informed his audience, employers in this state are compelled to take out large amounts of insurance to protect them against damage suits instigated in many cases by "shyster" lawyers who prey upon the unsuspecting laboring man who has been injured. As in all cases, the cost is ultimately paid by the consumer or individual citizen, he said.

Eight states, including Missouri, have no workmen's compensation law at the present time, according to Dr. Dyer.

"The great industries of our country are seeking new locations where they will be aided by modern legislation but not restricted by a number of useless laws," the speaker continued. "The South is just at the beginning of a great industrial expansion. Here the big business man finds an adequate supply of American labor and the cooperation of the lawmakers."

Dr. Dyer said that Tennessee, especially, has been benefitted by the trend of industries to the West and South.

Discussing the movement of "big business to the less populated sections of the Country, the speaker said there is a tendency at present to locate in small cities where farm labor may be used while not employed in agricultural work.

Hamlin and West Are Putting Up Big Top

Price of Season Tickets for Week to Be Advanced 25 Per Cent at 8 O'Clock Thursday Morning.

The big top is going up.

Yesterday the tent crew for the local Chautauqua, which starts Thursday, arrived in Maryville with the tent and equipment, and today the mass of canvas and poles is assuming the proportions of tent, walls, and booths.

Courtney Hamlin of Palmyra, Mo., and Irving West of Cedar Rapids, Ia., are tent men with the Chautauqua. Hamlin is a student at the University of Missouri, and West attends Coe College at Cedar Rapids.

The tent this year is the same size as that used in previous Chautauquas here. It is 131 by 76 feet.

The crew which will have charge here came from Woodbine, Ia. The name of the superintendent here is not yet known.

The price of season tickets will be advanced 25 per cent at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, L. L. St. Clair, chairman of the guarantors' committee, announced this afternoon. Reports from tickets sold up to this afternoon indicated that the total guarantee of $1,785 has almost been attained.

Individual competition is running strong. One person has sold forty-seven tickets and another forty-two.

Miss Helen Dunn of Columbia visited in Maryville Sunday with her aunt, Mrs. W. C. Frank, and other relatives. She was en route to Bolckow to spend her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Dunn.

BABY DROWNS IN A CISTERN

WILMA JEAN McCOMBS, 2, NEAR MAITLAND, IS VICTIM.

MOTHER IS WITNESS

Baby Is Plunged Into Water When Board Breaks.—Body Rescued In Ten Minutes.

Wilma Jean McCombs, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCombs, who live on the Dave Gelvin ranch two miles south of Maitland, was drowned at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when she fell in a cistern.

The baby had gone to the cistern with her mother when Mrs. McCombs went for a bucket of water. A board broke and the child fell into the cavity.

It was probably ten minutes before help could be secured and the body was taken from the water. Attempts to revive the child were continued unavailingly until 9 o'clock.

Besides her parents, Wilma Jean is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Sol Dreher of Graham and Mrs. Evelyn Culp of Fillmore; and five brothers, Austin, of Bigelow, and Guy, Harland, Wilson and Gerald at home.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Christian Church in Maitland. Burial will be made in the Maitland cemetery.

Vote in Maryville and County Light

Ballots Cast At Four Precincts Here, at 2 P. M., Total But 665.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon, 665 persons had voted at the primary election in Maryville. This is one of the lightest votes cast in a primary in a number of years and unless more voting is done this afternoon, the indications point to the lightest vote ever cast here. The total vote by wards here was:

First ward, 148.
Second ward, 150.
Third ward, 178.
Fourth ward, 189.

Very few workers, outside of the candidates themselves were around the polls here.

Reports received from over the county point to a light vote in the rural districts.

Clem Bremer and daughter, Margaret, returned Sunday evening from Omaha, where they attended the funeral of the former's sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Frenzer.

MANY VOTERS STAY AT HOME

PROCTOR REPORTED IN LEAD IN ST. JOSEPH.

HAWES BREAKS EVEN

Governor and Mrs. Baker Cast First Vote At State Capital—St. Louis Balloting Light.

St. Joseph, Aug. 3.—A fragmentary count over the city at noon today indicated that David M. Proctor is leading George H. Williams in the Republican vote. Blodget Priest's vote was negligible. Harry B. Hawes was just about breaking even with the dry combination of Meredith and Cockrell.

Spirited contests for places on the Democratic ticket is expected to make the vote one of the heaviest ever cast here in a primary.

The governor and Mrs. Baker, who had just arrived on a morning train from Californina, were at the polls when they opened and cast ballots one and two.

The primary caused all of the state employes to desert the capital.

Kansas City, Aug. 3.—Kansas City cast a normal vote in the state and county primaries early this afternoon following light early morning activities.

The election board estimated at 1 o'clock the vote averaged 55 to the precinct and on that basis predicted 50,000 votes would be cast, divided evenly between Democrats and Republicans.

Both parties, the commissioners estimated, will fall below the total of the 1924 primary when the Republican polled 31,600 and the Democrats 49,000 in Jackson county.

St. Louis, Aug. 3.—Voting was light throughout the morning in the primary election here. After four hours of balloting, it was estimated that only about 20,000 votes, or a little more than 11 per cent of the total registration of 269,888, had been cast.

Democrats say the light vote here is favorable to Harry B. Hawes' opponents, Judge Ewing Cockrell and Willis H. Meredith.

Holds U. S. Ships May Be Seized Anywhere

Effective Weapon for Combatting Liquor Smuggling Placed In Hands of Coast Guards.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The right of the United States government to search and seize vessels engaged in illicit trade anywhere on the high seas was upheld today by the department of justice.

Under an opinion by Attorney-General Sargent any vessel of American registry may be seized for violation of the prohibition and customs laws, whether or not it is within the territorial waters of the United States.

Sargent's ruling is based on a decision by the federal court of appeals which upset the mandates of the lower courts holding that the government may seize American vessels only when they are within the twelve-mile limit.

Such interpretation placed American ships in the same category as those flying foreign flags. Since many rum smugglers fly the American flag, the coast guard was placed at a serious disadvantage in fighting this class of liquor runners.

Officials declared that the decision places a new and effective weapon in the hands of the coast guards fighting the smugglers.

Missouri Youths at U. S. Training Camp

Begin Four Weeks of Educational and Competitive Army Training at Ft. Leavenworth—Cost $150,000.

Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Aug. 3.—Two thousand youths of Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas with an everage hat size 7¼, shoe size 7½; and age 18, today are experiencing their second day as privates of the 1926 citizens army of the Seventh Corps area.

Mustered in Sunday, outfitted and examined, the citizen soldiers began their four weeks of educational and competitive army training. The first regimental formation was held yesterday afternoon when the cadets were reviewed and administered the oath of allegiance by Brig. Gen. E. L. King, camp commandant.

The camp is estimated to cost the government about $150,000.

LOCAL RULE IS STATE'S ASSET

SUBJECT ONLY TO RESTRICTIONS OF CONSTITUTION.

MORE THAN DIVISIONS

In Telephonic Address, President Coolidge Declares That Self-Government Is Chief Function.

White Pines Camp, N. Y., Aug. 3.—The chief treasure of the state is its local self-government, subject only to the restrictions self-invoked by adoption of the national Constitution, President Coolidge declared today in a speech carried 2,000 miles over a long distance telephone to Denver, where Colorado is officially celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of its admission to the Union.

In delivering this address, the President departed from his previously announced policy of never again making a radio talk when no visible audience was present.

"The celebration is exceedingly appropriate at this time," Mr. Coolidge declared. "The nation is inclined to disregard altogether too much both the functions and duties of the states. They are much more than sub-divisions of the federal government. They are also endowed with sovereignty in their right.

"Of course, one of their chief glories lies in the fact that they are all partners in the American spirit, all a part of the American nation, but a great deal of the strength of the federal government lies in the fact that the states have the power and the right to function locally and independently, subject only to the restrictions which they themselves have invoked by adopting the national Constitution."

Ormiston Affidavits Attacked Vigorously

Deputy District Attorney Claims Evidence Disapproving Denial Of "Love Cottage" Romance With Evangelist.

Los Angeles, Aug. 3.—Sensational attacks upon the affidavits sent from Chicago by Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at Angelus temple, in an effort to clear the name of Aimee Semple McPherson by denying that she was his companion in the Carmel-by-the-Sea "love cottage" were made by deputy district attorney Ryan with the reopening today of the grand jury investigation into the asserted kidnapping of the evangelist.

"I have evidence which will break down Ormiston's affidavits", declared Ryan, "and we can prove the facts by competent witnesses who do not agree with Ormiston's statements."

The grand jury was distinctly displeased with the attitude taken by district attorney Keyes in announcing that the investigation was ended.

DRY LEADERS TO BE CALLED

SLUSH FUND COMMITTEE CALLS "PAYMASTER."

"JIM" REED AT HELM

Missourian Takes Reins In Absence of Other Members, Who Fail To Arrive In Chicago On Time.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—The Senate slush fund committee will extend its Illinois primary inquiry to include all Anti-Saloon League activities on behalf of any candidate in the recent million-dollar Illinois campaign, it was definitely announced this afternoon.

Senator James A. Reed, Democrat of Missouri, chairman of the committee, announced the wet and dry question would be delved into because reports had reached him of activities of the League in the Illinois primary.

Col. Frank L. Smith, Republican victor, and Senator William B. McKinley, the loser, were both indorsed by the League. It is understood a large amount of money was spent in Illinois by the League. Wayne B. Wheeler, testifying before the committee in its recent Pennsylvania probe, declared the sum of $1,356,439 had been spent by the League in Illinois since prohibition was enacted.

A subpoena was issued this afternoon for the League's "state paymaster." His name was not revealed. At the same time it was also reported that F. Scott McBride, former head of the League, would also be called before the comittee.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Resumed as a one-man inquiry, the Senate slush fund investigation into the million-dollar Illinois Senatorial primary turned today to the conduct of the campaign in the southwest corner of the state.

Senator James A. Reed, Democrat of Missouri, conducted the inquiry single-handed, his committee colleagues failing to reach Chicago in time for the hearing. Reed announced at the outset that he would go ahead alone and explained that the full committee had conferred their authority on him.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Ready to tear the lid off Illinois politics, the Senate slush fund committee met here today to resume its inquiry into charges of corruption, ballot stealing, terrorism and slush in the recent million-dollar Senatorial primary.

A batallion of witnesses were under subpoena, most of them to be questioned on the activities of different Republican factions in Cook County, Chicago, during the primary. The committee planned if possible to go behind the scenes and learn the truth of charges that elections here have ben decided not by the voters but by gunmen, ballot thefts and fraudulent counts.

Civil authorities, meanwhile, moved toward a local clean-up. A special grand jury was impanneled in the county criminal court to investigate "criminal conditions, vote frauds and alleged alliances between the police and the criminals."

The jury met today to hear as its first witnesses officials of the polling places where it is said flagrant frauds occurred in the recent primary.

Say Arsenal Was not Large Enough Storage

Report of Investigating Board Asks Congress for Two New High-Type Explosive Places.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The Lake Denmark, N. J., arsenal, which exploded with a damage of 47 million dollars and a loss of twenty-one lives, was not large enough for storage of vast amounts of high explosives, according to the report today of the board of inquiry, which investigated the July disaster.

Recommendations that the arsenal be rebuilt and that Congress be asked to authorize two new type high explosive arsenals, one on the east coast and one on the west coast, were made. Each would cover 100 square miles.

REFORMING ART

Sweet are the uses of publicity, especially in matters of art. Not long ago a Boston reformer sought a court injunction restraining the publication of the peppery Mr. Mencken's "American Mercury" because a certain issue contained a story that the reformer objected to as immoral. He failed in his purpose, and that seemed to be that. But it was a whole lot more than that.

Now it is announced that the story in question is being dramatized for production on the stage. Not the movie stage, either, but the speaking stage. It will be brought forth in full life, language and all. Which is rather easy to accomplish in this liberal age, when the "legitimate" stage will stand for almost anything.

The moral merits or demerits, however, of this particular production are not the present point. The point is that such is the power of modern publicity, for good or ill, and so many "publics" of varied tastes are found within the one big, simple public that is usually assumed to exist, that general advertising of almost anything will bring it financial success from people who want that sort of thing, whether the advertising is intentional or otherwise. Which is something for every reformer to consider well before he tackles anything offending his standards.

DENTAL GUM ABROAD

American chewing gum, long viewed with polite horror in cultured Europe, has arrived at last. But in polite disguise.

Merely as something to chew at for pleasure, our choice product was frowned on in Germany. If the Germans were going to chew gum, they would do it only from a sense of duty. So the manufacturers cannily persuaded the German minister of finance to remove the chewing gum from the list of imported "confections" and classify it as "dentrifice." That works better. The cultured Germans will now indulge without shame, in the consciousness—or at least in the belief—that the stuff is good for their teeth.

Maybe it is. And for their nerves, too, if some physicians are to be credited. Also, we doubt not, for their jaws. Thousands of Americans have probably been saved from chinlessness and maxillary weakness, in this age of prepared and predigested foods, by a habit requiring them to go through the motions of mastication. Chewing gum may yet save the jaws of the race from deterioration and disappearance.

DIVORCE CURE

Recently compiled statistics reveal the fact that Cuyahoga County, O., where Cleveland is situated, granted 825 more divorces during the year that just ended than in the preceding year. Since Cleveland is not particularly noted for being any worse in this matter than other parts of the country, it is likely that these figures are indicative of the national tendency.

The causes and cure of divorce have been the serious concern of judges and preachers and other thoughtful citizens for some time. Changing standards of home life, insufficient preparation for marriage, hasty marriages, lack of uniformity in state laws and various other factors have all been given their due attention in trying to solve the problem.

One writer on the subject pointed out a few months ago that too many young couples marry with the fairy tale expectation of "living happily ever after" and when they find that married life requires co-operation, hard work, self- discipline, sacrifice and other sterling qualities but strenuous virtues, they simply flunk out.

THERE SEEMS TO BE A LOT OF SIGN DISBELIEVERS.

Undoubtedly uniform state legislation in regard to marriage and divorce will help some by cleaning up dubious situations and making any couple married in one state married in all. But more than that, it is necessary to educate young people from childhood—to face their problems and to solve them instead of dropping or dodging the difficult ones. The development of a better social attitude—a matter of gradual evolution—is probably as important in this matter as legislation or court procedure.

GOOD SPEECH

"Speech education," says a specialist in speech training, " is necessary because we talk for others, not for ourselves, and the well-trained speaked has the best of all methods for transmitting his thoughts.

Parents should begin good speech training for their children from the start. "Doesums likeums?" and the whole array of similar phrases of 'baby talk" really do not make the infant any happier or indicate any greater parental affection than simple but correct speech would do, and they do leave bad speech habits to be overcome later.

Teachers, say this authority, should not confine their instruction to grammar and spelling, but should include enunciation, pronunciation and voice resonance. Four factors help in the cultivation of correct and pleasant speech. They are:

Relaxation, the greatest need for all Americans; proper breathing; correct vocalization, meaning the right manipulation of vowels and consonants, and the habit of thinking, os opposed to the habit of mental haste to which Americans are so liable.

The English language is a beautiful one and deserves greater respect and better usage than it gets even from American born to it. Incidentally, a certain poise and calm come with correct and leisurely speech which would be beneficial to American nerves and character.

There is a good deal of easy money in Chicago but the easiest seems to be running for office and seeing Samuel Insull.

Warren, Ohio, is said to be without a police force. This seems to have been the trouble in Canton, but Canton continued to pay salaries and Warren has cut them off.

Men have been able to conquer about everything except loneliness. They must have help on that.

Mussolini has ordered his subordinates to stop their quarreling. He wants it understood that he can attend to all that himself.

They say there has been danger of the White House roof at Washington falling in, but there are a lot of Statesmen who would like to take a chance under it at that.

A news dispatch says "New York children need sleep and baths." They need sleep and baths whether in New York or elsewhere but they have a better chance to get both away from the congestion of the big cities. The same article says eight per cent of the children of New York are sleeping four in a bed and in some cases more and it is a safe bet that most of them are mighty poor beds.

One fact is becoming clear with reference to bus traffic on the public highways. If buses are to remain as large as some of the interstate buses and even become larger, the highways will have to be built wider to accomodate them. When a bus is wide enough to cover two-thirds of a road and long enough that it covers both sides of the road on a curve the only thing for a lighter car is to get entirely off the road or be knocked off and quite frequently they haven't time to do it voluntarily. Highway No. 2 is full of big buses. Some of them running all the way from Denver to Chicago. They are already longer than the old time street car and some of them talk of adding cafe service and other features that would ants, and the habit of thinking, as op-

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

By Charles P. Stewart.
NEA Service Writer.

Washington.—Trust as extraordinary a senator as James A. Reed of Missouri to have an extraordinary secretary.

The fact is that Hicklin Yates is far more than a mere secretary, or even super-secretary. He comes pretty close to being an assistant senator. Indeed, there are quite a few full senators who aren't as important as Assistant Senator Yates.

Reed is very proud of his secretary, or assistant, and he has reason to be. Yates is a unique possession and extremely valuable.

Reed has so many interests and such strenuous ones, he's on so many Senate committees and sub-committees and special committees, he conducts so many investigations, he makes so many speeches, he's involved in so many fights, his time is so occupied and overoccupied that there simply isn't enough of him to go around.

As the saying is, he ought to be incorporated.

Well, in effect, so he is, with himself as president, engaged in mapping out broad general policies. Yates, as vice president and general manager, is in charge of the company's actual operations.

For instance, everybody wondered how in the world Reed managed to push that investigation into the late Pennsylvania Republican senatorial primary election and keep up with his regular Senate work at the same time.

The investigation alone ran three sessions daily and far into the night. By itself it looked as if it was enough to keep the Missouri senator more than fully occupied while it lasted. Yet he always was on hand in the Senate chamber when the solons were transacting business, mixing into everything, debating and discussing and orating, just as if he had nothing else on his mind.

How did he do it?

The answer is—Hicklin Yates.

When Reed was appointed chairman of the slush fund investigating committee, Yates as his secretary, automatically became the committee's secretary.

He worked up the whole investigation.

It was his case, so to speak, prepared by him as an office lawyer prepares a case, to turn over to the court room specialist who develops it, through the examination and cross-examination of witnesses, sums up and demands a verdict on the evidence.

NEW PARLEY IN PROGRESS

NEGOTIATIONS RESUMED FOR RELIGIOUS SETTLEMENT.

TENSITY IS RELIEVED

Mexico City, Aug. 3.—Negotiations have been renewed for the settlement of the dispute between the Mexican government and the Roman Catholic Church, it was reported this afternoon.

These reports were supported by the fact that Pascual Diaz, bishop of Tobasco, today for the second time called at the office of attorney general Romeo Artega and held a long conference with the official. Neither the attorney general nor the bishop would discuss the conference but it was stated at the archbishopric that Bishop Diaz has been given authority to speak for the church in all matters.

Mexico City, Aug. 3.—The deadlock between the Mexican government and the Catholic church today seemed tighter than ever but the tensity of the situation appeared to be somewhat relieved.

Police guards have been withdrawn from the churches in many places and additional military stationed in the streets have remained in their barracks. The control of the church has passed into the hands of the municipal committee in almost every district in Mexico and they have been opened again for services conducted by lay leaders.

Thus far, the aconomic boycott put into effect by the Catholics has not resulted in any general tie-up of business. Although the early peace overtures have been rejected by the government, as exclusively announced by the International News yesterday, it is learned that renewed efforts are being made to bring about some sort of an accord.

President Calles stands pat in his insistence that the laws must be administered in full and that at present it is difficult to see how a compromise can be reached that will not be a back-down for one side or the other.

Former Nodaway Countian, Now Writer, Declares He Still Knows His A B C's

Mrs. Ida C. McKenzie, who taught Dale Carnegie, Nodaway County writer, his A. B. C's., has received the following letter from him, written at Paris, France:

"Mrs. Ida C. McKenzie,
Maryville, Mo.

"My Dear Mrs. McKenzie:

"On March 21st, 1925, Mr. Leslie G. Somerville sent me your card. I intended to write you immediately, but brought the letter with me to America and have had it before me for dictation month after month. I have not written you because I have been so pressed for time this winter that I have had to neglect practically all of my social correspondence. I am sailing for Europe again on Wednesday, but even if I miss the boat I am going to take time to write you.

"You must have taught at Rose Hill in about 1894 or 1895. I remember you very clearly, and I would give a great deal if both of us could turn back the hands of time and begin this bizarre adventure called "life" all over again. How very, very much has happened since you taught me the A B C's. The world of science, and medicine, and transporfation, and communication, and thought, and education have all but been re-made. Why, I understand that children are not even being taught their A B C's any more. Wouldn't that have been rank pedigogical heresy in 1894? Although the new way may be correct, personally I am most grateful to you for having taught me mine. You must have performed your duty well, for I can still repeat them.

"I have spent practically all of my time from 1920 until last autumn in Europe, yet I saw nothing in all Italy or France or England that affected me so much as did the sight of the old Rose Hill school house in 1921. I hadn't seen it then for about twenty years. I walked through the woods of the farm that we used to own. Many of the same trees were there, but where was the little grey eyed boy that used to play under them? I realized that childhood had gone, youth had gone, forever; that my mother and father had grown old and were losing their strength and vigor. A thousand memories and a thousand regrets came rushing over me, like a stream; and I sat down and sobbed brokenly for a long time. No, there is no other spot in the world that can affect my emotions as much as the territory right around Rose Hill and Bedison.

"I don't know when I shall be in Maryville again, but, when I am, I hope I shall have the pleasure of seeing you. Whenever I am there, I surely am going back to old Rose Hill again. Wouldn't it be delightful if you could come back to Rose Hill for one afternoon and have all your old students there? How impossible that would be! They are scattered to the North and the South and the East and the West. Paul Gray, my great chum, as you know, is dead.

"I am spending my life doing the last thing in the world that I ever dreamed of doing when you were teaching me the A B C's. I am training business men to speak in public. I don't mean elocution, or any of that nonsense. Business men despise that; but they do have occasion sometimes to stand on their feet and address a business group, or a social or professional gathering. They want to be able to do this with credit. They want to be able to think on their feet and to say what they have to say in a straightforward and forceful manner. All this requires training and experience.

"I am proud to say that I have some of the biggest business men in the nation in my classes. They are held in the Manufacturers Club, Philadelphia, the Penn Athletic Club, Philadelphia Real Estate Board, Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the New York Credit Men's Association, Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, and I also conduct several private groups.

"In the meantime, I am writing a novel. I spent almost a year working on a novel of Missouri life, but I must rewrite the first third of it. Before I do that, I am going to write a novel in which Abraham Lincoln is one of the main characters. I shall be working on that this summer in Switzerland, but I expect it will take me several summers to complete it.

"My text books on Public Speaking for business men are the official text books for all Y. M. C. A. schools. They are used in over two hundred classes for business men each year throughout the United States, Canada, New Zealand and Australia.

"Do forgive me for talking so much about myself, and, when you write me, tell me a great deal about yourself and about Maryville.

"My address until October 1st will be in care of the Guaranty Trust Company, 1-3 rue des Italiens, Paris, France.

"Sincerely yours,
"DALE CARNEGIE."

Man Who takes Up Parachute Jumping For Life Work Needs the Sympathy of All, Gorton Says

Thrills a-plenty are given him who takes a parachute jump from an airplane, according to Earl Gorton, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gorton of Pickering. Young Gorton is at home on furlough until August 20 from the Naval Air Station in San Diego, Cal. He has been in the air service for a little more than two years, and now holds the rank of temporary junior officer.

This is what he says about parachute jumping:

Curiosity is a strange trait in every human. It is in all of us to a certain extent and in various shapes and forms but I have often wondered why a man leaping out of a plane attracts attention. If we see an object fall from a height we usually watch it with intense interest and concentration until it has gone out of sight or stopped it's descent in some manner. But in the case of a human being hurtling through space it seems that something besides curiosity holds us spellbound until his fall has been arrested.

Perhaps it is sympathy of a different sort than that which we have for a person enduring hardships, but I can state that the young fellow who takes parachute jumping for a life's vocation or for thrills, needs the sympathy of all when he goes aloft for that first trip through nothing but atoms and molecules.

Telling of the first one is a job and writing it is a position, but I'll try to take the reader up and let him fall off in the approved style.

The parachute you are to use in this jump is known as the United States airplane parachute, training type. The training set consists of two silk parachutes, one secured on the back and one on the chest, known as seat pack and chest or lap pack, respectively. The back set is the largest, measuring 28 feet in diameter, and is the main chute; the chest pack measures 22 feet in diameter and is used in case of emergency or to check the rate of descent when nearing the ground.

Fear as to the strength of the parachute is dismissed upon inspection of the silk body and lines and the substantial harness webbing with well-made fittings.

The parachute has been folded and the harness fitted to you until you feel comfortable standing upright. The straps are snug but not tight enough to cause pain while walking about. Outside, the plane is ready with a hard-boiled pilot who has a "come-on-get-in-hurry" expression. It seems that he has other things to do besides accomodating people who leave planes in flight.

The plane is a standard Navy D-T, (Douglas Torpedo plane), with a hi-compression Liberty 420 H. P. motor. On the left side of the fuselage is a step 4 inches wide and 3 feet long secured half way between the top and bottom, within easy reaching distance of the left foot in climbing out. You are drilled in finding your position on the step for five minutes when finally the instructors gives the word and you are ready to do it or be finished doing it. The pilot turns around and informs you of his signals. When he attains an altitude of 2,000 feet he will head in against the wind and just before he reaches the spot where he wants you to leave the plane, he will raise his hand, the signal to get out on the step, and at a nod of his head you will loose and—its up to you after that.

Here we go—the pilot tests his motor, gives the signal to carry away the blocks and, the plane lunges off the line, taxiing for the take-off. You look at the wind sack on the hangar and at the field and try to visualize yourself making an easy landing on a certain soft-appearing grassy mound. With a roar, a few bumps, and a zoom, the plane takes off and you realize or try to realize that you've got to leave your very secure position in the plane and come down feet first with a silk unbrella performing baffling antics over your head.

You are now 1,000 feet up and in a few seconds you learn that your friend, the pilot, has a keen sense of humor. He takes you for a visit to a cemetery a mile or so west of a small town. Arriving at the cemetery he throttles down the motor, puts the plane into a steep left wing-over or bank, and points down—but you see nothing for you are looking straight ahead. Realizing that his passenger fails to see the point—perhaps it's quite a distance below—he takes you to a larger cemetery located on the southern boundary of the village. He repeats the left wing over and the point. Then, when you fail to respond, with a disgusted look he kicks the plane back on an even keel and maneuvers for altitude and jumping position.

You see the edge of the field passing behind, 2,000 feet down—straight down. You concentrate on the back of the pilot's head, praying for a blackjack, but before you can manage a fire extinguisher, up comes his hand—the signal to get out! Wouldn't you like to sit there all safe and sound? Yes—you would—but that signal. With somewhat of an effort you stand up, place your left foot gingerly over the side, feeling for that step. Ah, there it is! With reluctance, your right foot comes out by itself and is placed by some unknown force one a line fore and aft of the left one. You put a grip of steel on the ring of the rip-cord, located on the left shoulder, and with your left hand you squeeze the leather padding on the cockpit.

Your eyes are glued on the pilot's face—what an ugly guy he is; looking like a demon! Then, with upper teeth glistening in a terrifying grin, the pilot gives one slow nod—the signal. Yes, the second one! Rallying your forces, you have almost made up your mind to let go when another unknown quantity tears your hand away, and slowly, slowly, you fall backwards! Your eyes are probably shut, but if they're not you can see the pilot peering down over the side laughing fiendishly. Then with an effort you realize that there's nothing but air between you and Mother Earth. It doesn't take you long to give a strong sharp yank, and the rip-cord comes clear of it's housing. You wonder what's happening in back, but before you can arrive at a conclusion—crack—and some giant has grabbed you by the back of the neck and proceeds to manhandle you. It's all over—you are descending with a gentle swinging motion; the ground is far below—then suddenly you miss the roar of the plane.

Gazing up at the white cloud over your head, you sigh a good long sigh full of meaning and a little prayer hooked on the end. You really feel like singing but again you decide it wouldn't be best. Some fun-loving sailor might hear you and think you were trying to drive the scare away. But you aren't through with your troubles, for now the ground appears to be only a yard or so below. You remember your instructions—to land with all muscles relaxed. You relax all over and wait with a blank mind—where is that ground? Peering down you attempt estimating where you will land, and after picking out the mound you wanted before you jumped, you imagine yourself settling gently down in the grass. But—what's wrong? For some reason unknown to you, the chute is carrying you on over the favorite spot. Looking back, you might make a few remarks about your luck.

With a sharp rap on your feet, you suddenly come down in a heap and roll over a few times. Everything seems to me in A-1 shape and you decide to get up. Rising gingerly, you stand—when with a rustling the chute catches a ground breeze and precipitates you gracefully on your head. Deciding that it's futile to rise again, you stay down and pull in on the bottom lines, according to instructions, dumping the air out of the chute, and after a few flutterings it collapses on the ground. Taking observations, you wonder why there wasn't someone on hand to catch you. Away down the field a truck filled with men, accompanied by an ambulance come bounding toward you, and upon arrival all jump out. One starts the operations of picking up the chute, and, unless you have already rid yourself of the harness, a couple assist you in snapping the straps. The instructor walks up and congratulates you on your jump, and especially your landing; whether it was a good one or not. You feel rather unnecessary but you know you have done well. Whether you feel proud of the deed depends on how you take things in general, the folks at home will hear about it—six months in the future.

Now, in writing this it ruined the better part of an hour, but if you were to actually jump it would take only 10 minutes. That proves my argument—it's a position to write an account of a live jump by parachute. In seven jumps, of which several were 1,000-foot free falls, no two have been alike, and I have experienced some close calls. So, in truth, the sensations of that first jump are are trivial in comparison with those of certain succeeding jumps, and to write an article on that particular jump is indeed difficult. I hope the reader has an idea of what takes place during a jump. Perhaps you can realize the value of a demonstration, applying it to the Air Service, where every man who goes aloft wears a parachute. It's value cannot be estimated, for when used at the proper time it saves life.

Big Welcome Home for Filipino Leader

Manila, Aug. 3—An elaborate welcome prepared for Senator Camena on his return tomorrow from Washington will mark the beginning of an intense political struggle between his followers and those of Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine senate, and until now undisputed leader of the independence forces.

By opposing congressional bills considered by the Filipinos to be detrimental to their cause, Camena is enjoying unprecedented national prestige.

Manila streets are brilliantly decorated and the welcome will have all the features of a carnival. The event was planned principally by political enemies of Quezon who wish Camena to replace him as the national hero. Colonel Carmi Thompson will participate briefly in the welcoming ceremony and will then withdraw, avoiding entanglement in the political situation. It is predicted that Thompson and Governor General Leonard Wood will be temporarily forgotten in the struggle which is bound to take place between the Filipino leaders.

The Thompson mission is continuing its automobile trips to neighboring provinces and tomorrow will visit Quezon's home town.

The GIRL in the MIRROR

By Elizabeth Jordan

COPYRIGHT BY THE CURTIS COMPANY

THE STORY.

CHAPTER I. — Barbara Devon's wedding and departure of her honeymoon leaves her brother "Laurie," successful playright but somewhat inclined to wildness, without her restraining influence. His theatrical associates, Rodney Bangs and Jacob Epstein, promise to "keep an eye on him."

CHAPTER II. — Laurie, who is wealthy, refuses to settle down to work, announcing his intention of resting and seeking "adventure." From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite.

CHAPTER III

Laurie Meets Miss Mayo

Laurie thought much that day about the girl in the morror, and he was again home at eleven that night, to the wonder of Mr. Bangs, who freely expressed his surprise.

"Something pleasant been coming your way?" he tactfully asked.

Laurie evaded the question, but he felt that something definitely pleasant had come his way. This something was a new interest, and he had needed a new interest very much. He hoped he would dream of the girl that night, but as he and Bangs unwisely consumed a Welsh rabbit before they went to bed, he dreamed instead of something highly unpleasant, and was glad to be awakened by the clear sunlight of a brilliant January day.

After breakfast he strolled across the square into the somber hall of the studio building on its southwest corner. The hall was empty, but he found and rang a bell at the entrance of a dingy elevator shaft. The elevator descended without haste. When it had reached the floor, the colored youth in charge of it inhospitably filled its doorway and regarded the visitor with indifference. This young man was easy to look at, but he was no one he knew.

Laurie handed him a dollar and the youth's expression changed, first to one of surprise, then to the tolerance of a man who is wise and is willing to share his wisdom. The visitor went at once to the point of his visit.

"A young lady lives here," he began. "She is very pretty, and she has reddish hair and brown eyes. She has a studio in one of the upper floors, at the front of the house. What's her name?"

The boy's face showed that he had instantly recognized the description, but he pondered dramatically.

"Dat young lady?" he then said. "Dat young lady mus' be Miss Mayo, in Twenty-nine, on de top flo'. She jes' moved in here las' Tuesday."

"Where does she come from, and what does she do?"

The boy hesitated. What did all this mean? And was he giving up too much for a dollar? Laurie grinned at him understandingly.

"I don't know her," he admitted, "and I don't expect to. I'd like to know something about her—that's all."

The youth nodded. He had the air of accepting an apology.

"I reckon she come fum some fur'n place. But I donno what she do," he reluctantly admitted. "Mebbe she ain't doin' nothin' yit. She's home mos' de time. She don' go out hardly 'tall. Seems like she don' know many folks."

He seemed about to say more, but stopped. For a moment he obviously hesitated, then blurted out what he had in mind.

"One t'ing got me guessin'," he muttered doubtfully. "Dat young lady, she don't seem t' eat nothin'!"

"What do you mean?" Laurie stared at him.

The boy shuffled his feet. He was on uncertain ground.

"Why, jes' what I said," he muttered, defensively. "Folkses here either eats in or dey eats out. Ef dey eats in, dey has stuff sent in—rolls an' eggs an' milk an' stuff like dat. Ef dey eats out, dey goes out, reg'lar, to meals. But Miss Mayo she don' seem to eat in or out. Nothin' comes in, an' she don' go out 'nough to eat reg'lar. I bin studyin' 'bout it consider'ble,' he ended; and he looked unmistakably relieved, as if he had passed on to another a burden that was too heavy to carry alone.

Laurie hesitated. The situation was presenting a new angle and a wholly unexpected one. It began to look as if he had come on a sentimental errand and had stumbled on a tragedy.

There was a chance that the boy might be all wrong in his inferences, although this chance, Laurie mentally admitted, was slight. He knew the shrewdness of this youths type, the precocious knowledge of human nature that often accompanies such training and environment as he had had. Probably he suspected even more than he had revealed. Something must be done.

Laurie drew a bill from his pocket.

"How soon can you leave the elevator?" he asked.

"'Bout one o'clock."

"All right. Now, here's what I want you to do. Take this money, go over to the Clarence restaurant, and buy a good lunch for that lady. Get some hot chicken or chops, buttered rolls, vegetables, and a bottle of milk. Have it packed nicely in a box. Have them put in some fresh eggs and extra rolls and butter for her breakfast. Deliver the box at her door as if it came from some one outside. Do that and keep the change. Understand?"

"Yaah, sah!" The boy's eyes and teeth were shining.

"All right. Go to it. I'll drop in later this afternoon for your report."

Laurie turned and walked away. Even yet the experience did not seem real. It was probably all based on some foolish notion of the youth's;

"Come, Let Me Have That," He Suggested, Imperturbably.

and yet he dared not assume that it was a foolish notion. He had the dramatist's distaste for drama anywhere except in its legitimate place, on the stage; but he admitted that sometimes it did occur in life. This might be one of those rare occasions.

Whatever it was, it haunted him. He lunched with Bangs that day, and was so silent that Bangs was moved to comment.

"If you were any one else," he remarked, "I'd almost think you were thinking!"

Laurie disclaimed the charge, but his abstraction did not lift. By this time his imagination was hard at work. He pictured the girl in the mirror as stretched on her virginal cot in the final exhaustion of starvation; and the successful effort to keep away from the studio building till four o'clock called for all his will power. Suppose the boy blundered or wasn't in time. Suppose the girl really had not eaten anything since last Tuesday! These thoughts, and similar ones, obsessed him.

At four he strolled into the studio hall, wearing what he hoped was a detached and casual air. When the elevator appeared, he entered it with the others who were waiting. He looked aloofly past the elevator boy as he did so, and that young person showed himself equal to the situation by presenting to this newcomer a stolid ebony profile. But when the lift had reached the top floor and discharged its passengers, the two conspirators lent themselves to the drama of their roles.

"Well?" asked Laurie eagerly. "Did you get it?"

"Yaas, sah."

"What happened?"

The boy stopped his descending car midway between two floors. He had no intention of having his scene spoiled. He bulged visibly under the news he had to impart. "I got de stuff you said, and I lef' it at dat young lady's do'," he began impressively.

"Yes."

"When I looked de nex' time, it was gone."

"Good!" She had taken it in." Laurie drew a breath of relief.

"No, sah. Dat ain't all." The boy's tone dripped evil tidings. "She brung it back."

"What!" His passenger was staring at him in concern.

"Yaas, sah. De bell rung fum her flo,' an' when I got up de young lady was standin' dere wid dat basket in her hand."

He paused to give Laurie the effect of the tableau, and saw by his visitor's expression that he had got it fully.

"Yes? Go on!"

"She look at me mighty sharp. She got brown eyes dat look right thoo you," he interpolated briskly. "Den she say, 'Sam, who done lef' dat basket at my do'!' I say, 'I done it, miss. It was lef' in de hall, an' de ca'd got yo' name on it. Ain't you order it?' I say.

"'No,' she say, 'dis yere basket ain't fo' me. Take it, an' ef you cain't find out who belong to it, eat dis yere lunch yo'self.' He paused. "I et it," he ended, solemnly.

Lauries lips twitched under conflicting emotions, but he closed the interview with a fair imitation of indifference.

"Oh, well," he said carelessly, "you must have been mistaken about the whole thing. Evidently Miss Mayo, if that's her name, wasn't as hungry as you were."

The boy nodded and started the car on its downward journey. As his passenger got off on the ground floor, he gave him a new thought to carry away with him.

"She'd bin cryin', dough," he muttered. "Her eyes was all red."

Laurie stopped and regarded him resentfully.

"Confound you!" he said, "what did you tell me that for? I can't do anything about it!"

The boy agreed hurriedly. "No, sah," he assured him. "you cain't. I cain't, neither. None of us cain't." he added as an afterthought.

Laurie slowly walked away. His thoughts scampered around and around like squirrels in a cage. The return of the basket, of course, might mean either of two conditions—that the girl was too proud to accept help, or that she was really in no need of it. Laurie had met a few art students. He knew that, hungry or not, almost any one of them would cheerfully have taken in that basket and consumed its contents. He had built on that knowledge in providing it. If the girl had taken it in, the fact would have proved nothing. Her refusal to touch it was suspicious. It swung the weight of evidence toward the elevator boy's starvation theory.

Laurie's thoughts returned to that imaginative youth. He saw him consuming the girl's luncheon, and a new suspicion crossed his mind. Perhaps the whole business was a bit of graft. But his intelligence rejected that suggestion. If this had been the explanation, the boy would not have concluded the episode so briskly. He had got the strange young man where he might have "kept him going" for days and made a good income in the process. As it was, there seemed nothing more to do. And yet—and yet— how the deuce could one let the thing drop like that? If the girl was really in straits—

A HARVEST OF DEATH TO BE AVERTED

An Educational Campaign for Women on Prenatal Care Would Save Thousands of Lives Which Now Perish Yearly.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

According to a recent announcement made by the United States Public Health Service, one out of every 150 mothers die in child birth. This means that in the United States 15,000 mothers die every year.

This report stated, too, that every year nearly a quarter of a million babies die in the United States who have not reached one year of age. Of these, 100,000 die during the first month of life.

These are terrible figures. Such a harvest of death is unnecessary. When we become really civilized and give every prospective mother the instruction she is entitled to receive, these figures will be changed.

The Public Health Service emphasizes the need of an educational campaign for women. The Service wants literature distributed and instruction given in every possible way.

It is an unfortunate thing that many a prospective mother never consult a physician until a few minutes before the birth of the baby. This is all wrong. She needs advice from the moment she knows her condition.

Many a case of kidney disease which could be successfully dealt with by early discovery is entirely overlooked. A bad heart, an unsuspected physical deformity, and other hazardous factors are undiscovered because of the failure to get competent medical advice.

It is all nonsense talking about the good old times. There were no good old times so far as mothers were concerned. Go into any old-time graveyard and study the tombstones. You will be shocked at the number of deaths occurring in infancy and the number of young mothers who were buried beside their infants.

If there is one thing in which we have made progress, it is in protecting the lives of infants and the lives of their mothers, but we haven't gone far enough. We must not permit one out of 150 mothers to die in childbirth.

The great trouble with young mothers is that they hesitate to talk about the matters we are discussing. They are unwilling to confide in the family physician. This is a mistake. Frankness and good sense at this time will mean the saving of a baby's life and perhaps the saving of a mother too.

The first thing a young couple should do after choosing a place of residence is to find out where is the nearest good doctor. If you are in doubt about this, ask the health officer of the town to tell you. Go to the priest or rabbi or minister and let him advise where there is an upstanding, fine physician. Don't be in a hurry to make the selection, but when you have decided what doctor you want, let the young couple call upon the physician and make his acquaintance. Tell the doctor you are more anxious to stay well than to get well. Don't be afraid to pay him a fee now and then, even though you don't seem in particular need of medical attention.

The advice I have given you is good advice no matter what happens, but if there is a prospect of an addition to the family, the young couple is neglecting a manifest duty if medical advice is not taken in the very beginning. It is this sort of thing the Public Health Service has in mind in its campaign for defeating disease and death.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—All interests on the Chicago Board of Trade today centered in the corn pit for that grain closed higher, while wheat was fractionally lower and oats unchanged.

Wheat lost ⅛ today. Liverpool closed sharply lower, Canadian news were bearish and the pressure of the new crop was felt. There was fair activity in the cash grain which also was lower.

Despite the weakness of wheat, corn made good gains and closed 1⅝ to 1⅞ higher than yesterday.

Oats closed unchanged from yesterday. There was very little done in this pit.

Provisions sold off early but recovered on commission house buying.

Hogs and Lambs Lower.

Cattle Higher.

As a result of last weeks sharp decline cattle receipts today at the various markets were reduced materially. Here the run was less than one-half that of a year ago and the lightest on any August Monday in a number of years past. The market showed renewed strength. Most kinds advancing 15 to 25 cents. Hog prices fell 15 to 25 cents to a new low position for the season and the 13 cents quotation was near the vanishing point. Sheep and lambs were weak to 25 cents lower. Western lambs sold up to $14.10.

Today's Receipts.

Receipts today were 12,000 cattle, 11,000 hogs, and 7,000 sheep, compared with 18,000 cattle, 9,000 hogs, and 7,000 sheep a week ago, and 27,850 cattle, 6,725 hogs, and 12,600 sheep a year ago.

Beef Cattle

Cattle prices were 15 to 25 cents higher, except extreme heavy weights and they sold slowly but at a slight advantage over late last week. Choice medium and light weight kinds met the strongest demand, several bunches selling up to $10. Other light weight grain fed steers brought $9.50 to $9.85, and heavy weight steers sold up to $9.40. The bulk of the fed steers brought $8.25 to $9.50. Kansas wintered and short fed steers brought $7.75 to $8.65 and Texas meal and cake fed steers brought $7.25 to $8.25. Straight grass fat steers brought $5.75 to $7.85. Grass cattle moved as freely as the grain fed steers. Cows and heifers were in active demand and mostly 25 cents higher. Fed steers were scarce. Veal calves advanced 50 cents, best selling up to $10.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

As the result of recent rains and cooler weather demand for stockers and feeders broadened considerably with prices up 15 to 25 cents. Weighty feeders found a ready outlet. Light weight stockers were scarce.

Hogs.

A break of 15 to 25 cents in hogs took the market to the lowest position since last April and left only the light weight classes selling up to $13. Compared with a week ago prices are off 40 to 65 cents. Today 130 to 160 pound hogs sold at $12.85 to $13.; 160 to 210 pounds $12.50 to $12.85; 210 to 250 pounds $12.00 to $12.50; 250 to 325 pounds $11.50 to $12.15; packed sows $9. to $10.; stags $9.50 to $10.25; stock hogs and pigs $12.50 to $13.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep and lambs were weak to 25 cents lower than last week's close. Most of the decline was in native lambs while western grades held nearly steady. Native lambs sold at $12.75 to $13.25; western lambs $13.75 to $14.10; yearlings $9.50 to $10.50; wethers $7.50 to $8.50; ewes $5.50 to $7.00.

Horses and Mules

Receipts of horses and mules showed a moderate increase over preceeding Mondays and trade expanded accordingly. Prices were quoted firm.

WHEAT LIFTS KANSAS DEBT

VIRGIN SOUTHWEST BOASTS "GROWING GOLD."

DONE ON LARGE SCALE

Unbroken Fields of 2,000 Acres or More Are Not Uncommon in "Newest El Dorado."

By C. L. JACOBY,
NEA Service Writer.

Dodge City, Kan., Aug. 3.—A new El Dorado has arisen—the El Dorado of the boundless southwest, where as far as the eye can see the land is yellow with growing gold.

In California men grew rich when they found rivers that flowed over golden sands.

In Colorado men dug fortunes out of golden mountains hidden in the lavender mists of the tinted foothills.

And in Kansas men are finding untold wealth in gold that grows on the end of wheat stalks.

Gold for California—gold for Colorado—but wheat for Kansas!

In the Dakotas and the rest of the northwest the wheat farmer may be in difficulties. In the middle west the farmer may have a list of grievances as long as the fence that surrounds his mortgaged corn fields. Banks may be failing and business firms collapsing because the farmer is hard-pressed—

But not in Kansas. The farmer here has struck pay dirt—rich, black dirt that lies in an unbroken harvest sea, level as a table for mile on golden mile, rippling and shimmering with thousands and thousands of acres of rich yellow grain.

Elevators Bursting.

Every farm yard has its great pile of threshed wheat, heaped high around cribs that can hold no more. Grain elevators are literally bursting with it. This year's yield, besides being abundant, is of such high quality that a given quantity of grain weighs far more than it ordinarily does. The walls of many an elevator have cracked and split open under the strain. The railroads cannot carry it away fast enough.

To understand conditions here in southwest Kansas it is necessary to contrast farming conditions here and elsewhere.

In the east a man thinks he has a good sized farm when he has 50 acres under cultivation. Eighty acres makes a ranch. In many a middle western state a quarter section of land is considered a big farm. But not here.

Wheat fields a thousand acres in size are the rule. Many are larger. A man whose field is smaller does not consider himself a "big" farmer. A number of men own two or three thousand-acre tracts in different localities. Some fields run over 2,000 acres; some even higher.

These fields this year are producing on an average a little better than 30 bushels to the acre. One man, with thousands of acres, expects to get about $150,000 for his crop this fall. Another is getting $20,000 for the produce from 680 acres. Still another put $2,000 worth of seed on 2,500 acres and netted $86,000 this year. Other similar examples could be repeated again and again.

With good wheat land, hitherto idle, selling for as low as $30 an acre, many a man has paid for his farm with one crop. Others begin by leasing their farms, buying them in a few years with the money received from the sale of the wheat they have grown.

Recently Developed.

It is only ten years since every square foot of this rich southwest Kansas territory was virgin soil, used only for pasturage. The development has not yet reached its limit, by any means. Probably half a million more acres are under cultivation this year than last. And there is plenty more waiting for development.

The total value of the wheat crop in this state this year will be around $185,000,000. Kansas, and all the middle west, will feel the effects.

Farm debts are being liquidated rapidly. New automobiles are replacing the weather-beaten cars that the farmers used to use. More money is being made available for schools. There is more money for roads. There is, in short, prosperity, and lots of it.

That is the new El Dorado—the land where wheat is yellow gold and the farmer is a prospector.

R. K. Archer of St. Louis is visiting at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clarence Headrick, and family, of Burlington Junction. Mr. Archer is a former Nodaway County resident.

Mrs. Ella Wiseman, her sons, Perry and Clark, and daughter, Frances, of Centralia, Kan., came Friday to visit Mrs. Wiseman's mother, Mrs. Frances Leffler of Wilcox.

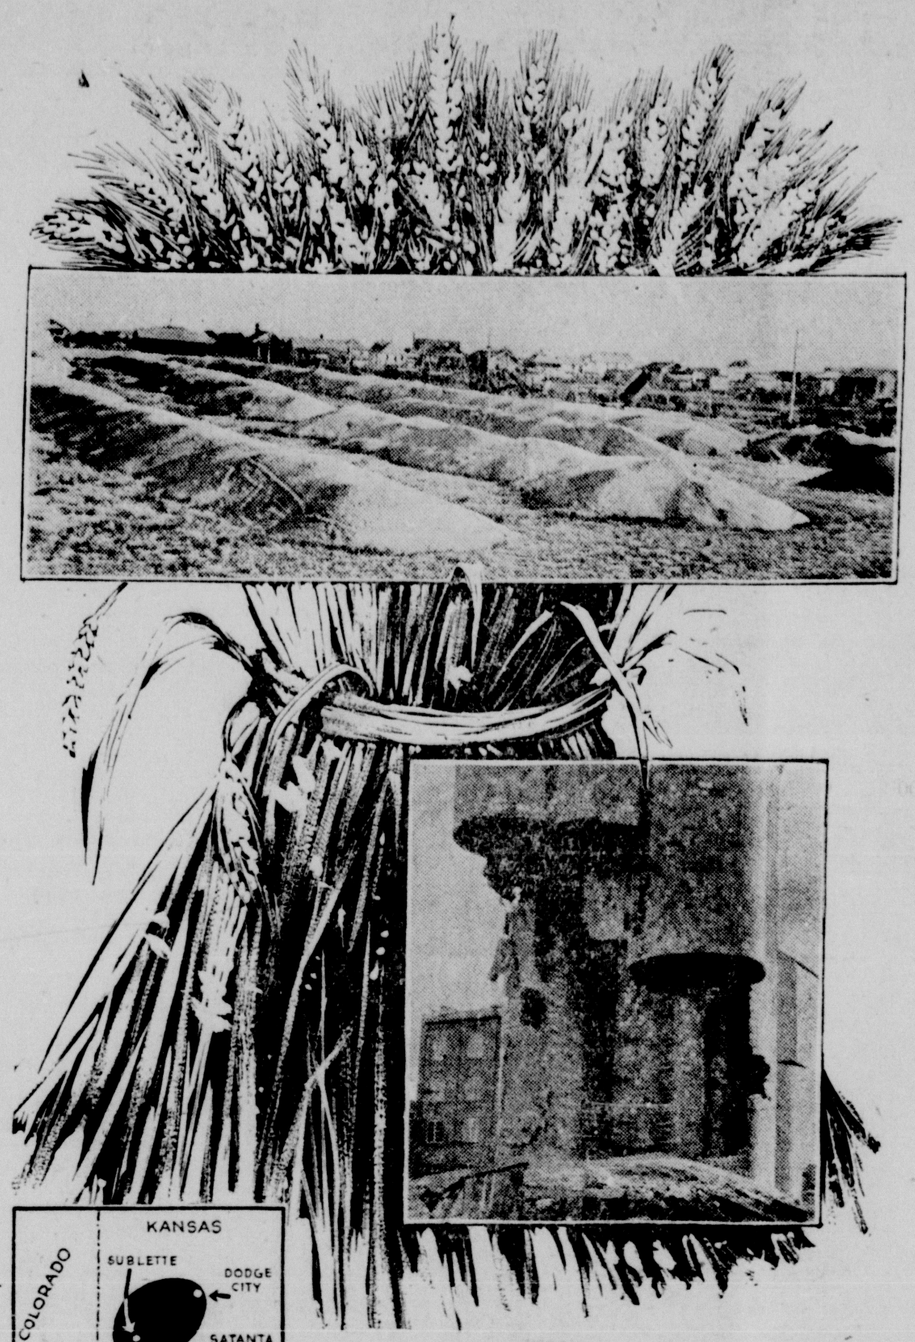
Where Gold Grows On Wheat Stalks



BLACK AREA SHOWS NEW WHEAT BELT

The picture at the top shows thousands of bushels of wheat lying in the open air on the edge of a Kansas town because no elevators can be found to accommodate it. Scenes such as this are common in southwestern Kansas this summer. Below is a picture showing how the tile storage tanks of a Saxman, Kan., milling company burst because of the weight of the wheat they contained. A few hours after this picture was taken the rest of the structure collapsed.

Land Near Conception Changes Ownership

Three transfers of property in which Thomas E. and Ellen Archer were parties were filed today with Mrs. Mamie Clardy, county recorder. All three were made on August 3, 1926.

U. S. Is Prosperous, "Spokesman" Believes

Views Accomplishments of Coolidge Administration During Its 3 Years Incumbency In White House.

White Pines Camp, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Unprecedented prosperity and economic stability have marked the three years of the Coolidge administration, the White House spokesman declared here today on the anniversary of Calvin Coolidge's incumbency in the White House.

Viewing the accomplishments of the last thirty-six months, the Coolidge mouthpiece analyzed the business and industrial situation at home and the economic situation abroad and found the United States fully recovered from the devastating effects of the World War and Europe well on the way to recovery.

The double tax reduction during the last three years has been largely responsible for America's healthy condition, the spokesman believes. Solving of the German reparation problem, he feels, marked Europe's first major strides toward recovery.

Tennis Shoes Save Life of Young Boy

Arkansas City, Kan., Aug. 3.—Clifford Awalt, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Awalt, is reporting that he wore a pair of tennis soles the other day.

While climbing a tree he slipped and grabbed an electric wire. The current from the wire formed a circuit through his body, coming out on his instreps against the trunk of the tree. As he fell to the ground his shoes were burning.

Attending physicians say that just the fact he was wearing rubber soled tennis shoes saved his life.

"From what I have seen and heard," Senator Reed said, "I am confident Hawes will win the Democratic nomination. I know little of the Republican situation, but from what my friends have told me I would say Senator Williams should win."
